The Collaboration Between OPPL and D97

- We recognize we have the same patrons (our kids!)
- We work together to teach the same resources
- We work together to decide which resources to purchase
- We avoid duplicate purchases and save taxpayer dollars

OPPL purchases databases that are specifically developed and curated for kids. They are oftentimes leveled to address the different reading and interest levels of our students.

Why a database, why not Google?

Always have your kids use the databases first for any research project!

►►► Electronic library databases and internet websites are easily confused. What's the difference?

Database Vs. Website

EXPERTS ▾

Content written and checked by professionals and experts.

COMPLETE ▾

Includes complete and correctly formatted citations.

MAINTAINED ▾

Regularly updated and maintained, in some cases daily.

SUBSCRIPTION ▾

Paid for by schools, libraries, or the state.

FOCUSED ▾

Designed for research. Organized to serve student needs.

ANYONE ▾

Anyone can create or contribute content.

UNFINISHED ▾

Dates, authors, and other important information often missing.

NEGLECTED ▾

Many sites not maintained, with broken links and outdated information.

"FREE" ▾

To those with internet access. Ads, promotional sites, and misinformation are the price.

MULTI-PURPOSE ▾

Serves many purposes and audiences.

►►► Great websites can be invaluable sources of information, but when it comes to academic research, databases are the real heavyweights!

The screenshot shows the Oak Park Public Library website. At the top, there is a dark grey header bar with a light grey background below it. The header bar contains the library's name "OAK PARK PUBLIC LIBRARY" in black text next to a red book icon. To the right of the logo are links for "My Account", a search bar with placeholder text "Search...", and radio buttons for "Catalog" and "Website" with a "Go" button. Below the header are four main navigation tabs: "VISIT", "BORROW & DOWNLOAD", "SERVICES", and "EVENTS & CLASSES". Under the "SERVICES" tab, there is a list of services: "For Kids", "For Teens", "For Job Seekers", "Meeting Spaces", "Computers & Printing", "Home Delivery", "Notary", "Test Proctoring", "Voter Registration", and "Ask a Question".

The screenshot displays a web-based educational database for life science. At the top, there are navigation links for "Earth & Space Science" and "Physical Science". On the right, there are links for "Site Help", "Logout", and the "ROSEN digital" logo. The main header features the "PowerKnowledge Life Science" logo, which includes a butterfly icon and a magnifying glass icon.

The left sidebar contains a "HOME" link and a "Cite this Article" button, which is circled in red. Below this, a "Print" and "Email" button are shown. A "Sections" section lists several articles: "Treefrogs Around the World", "Toe Pads, Ticket to the Trees", "Color Change", "Small Frog, Big Eyes", "A Trill, a Honk, and a Gross Sound", "Eggs in the Trees", and "Tadpoles".

The main content area is titled "Treefrogs" and shows a "Listen" button, also circled in red. The article "Treefrogs Around the World" is described as follows: "Treefrogs come in many shapes, sizes, and colors. They are yellow, green, red, and brown. They are like jewels in a tropical forest. They might also live in your backyard." To the right of the text is a photograph of a bright yellow treefrog clinging to a green branch.

Hungary is a land-locked nation located in central Europe. It is slightly smaller than South Korea or the state of Indiana. Hungary shares its borders with seven other countries: Austria, Serbia, Croatia, Slovenia, Romania, Ukraine, and Slovakia. It's a land of plains, rivers and lakes, gently rolling hills, and low mountains. Hungary's mostly flat landscape is ideal for

The screenshot shows the Britannica School Elementary interface. At the top, it says "Britannica School Elementary" and has a search bar. On the right, there's a "My Britannica" button. The main title is "Stegosaurus". To the left, there's a sidebar with a "Related" section and a "When and Where Stegosaurus Lived" section. The central content area has an "Introduction" heading with a summary of the Stegosaurus. On the right, there are icons for sharing and a "Reading Level" button set to level 1.

Stegosaurus

Introduction

The name Stegosaurus means “covered lizard” or “roof lizard.” The dinosaur called Stegosaurus was given this name because it had a row of enormous bony plates that ran along its back. Stegosaurus is the most familiar and the largest of the stegosaurs, or plated dinosaurs.

Why are there so many apps through the library?

By having a variety of apps, we can offer different materials. We want to make sure you have a wide selection to choose from virtually. Once you download and log into the apps, you can download many of these materials directly from our catalog to your device. Ask a library staff member and he or she will show you how!
